Thirteen years ago, absolute horror and betrayal chased Abby Monroe from her childhood home in upstate New York. Vowing to never return, she built a new life for herself in Florida where she could ignore the ghosts of her past and live in relative peace and safety. But when tragedy compels her to return to Riverside, Abby finds herself navigating the mysterious small town where everyone has a secret, and the slithering lines between right and wrong, friend and foe, and love and hate are as blurry as the murky waters of Green Lake.

Jason Talbot's whole world turned upside down when his family was brutally murdered and the only thing left worth living for fled the state. Bitter and disillusioned, he has spent the last thirteen years trying to make sense of the madness and navigating the serpentine cesspool that is his life in an alcoholic, drug-induced haze. When his best friend is murdered and all seems lost, hope and clarity arrive in the form of his ex-fiancée, Abby Monroe. But as the days pass and the body count rises, Jason realizes that the best way to save the only woman he's ever loved is to make her leave Riverside as soon as possible, before it's too late.
